Do you wet the bed?

First came the amazing “The Joy of Bedwetting”. Now comes his first novel – “Overlapping Stains: A Bedwetting Novel”

You were once a bedwetter. We all were. But in ABDL country, bedwetting is more common than in any other group. Be it accidental, natural or deliberate, many of us still wet the bed.

Maybe you wet your diapers at night. Maybe your nappies take the brunt of your sleep-time pee or maybe... you just let the sheets of your plastic-protected bed take the wetness instead.

Forrest's brilliant book contains 45 photographs that add to the 30,000 word story of Richard, a 22 year old chronic bedwetter who moves in with an older woman, Alice, who accepts his wet sheets and helps him move forward.

If you wet the bed or wish you did, you cannot miss this book.

Who am I? Am I an adult or a baby... or both?

The question of who we are as ABDLs is a big one and one not easily answered. And yet, it is THE question for us, just the same. While most people struggle with the question of who they are, ABDLs have to face the added complication of what AGE we are as well. The presence of regular regression - and for many, the constant desire to wear diapers and have some baby objects all the time, just makes it harder.

We have five books available that help you to answer elements of that enormous question. They approach the issue from psychology and also from relationships with others. Check them out and see if they can help you find some answers to the perennial question of...

Who am I?
