

Our Labrador is now very old and in the last months of life, but he has always been a wonderful dog with children. Even as a puppy he would play gently with them and stand between them and strangers or any perceived danger like traffic. With adults however, he was a brainless ball of energy.

It has always been amazing how he behaved so stupidly with adults yet with children was so responsible and so protective. And surprisingly, he is just as protective of my adult baby as of any other infant or child. He would instantly see the regressed child instead of the adult and be protective and responsible with her.

Yesterday, baby Joanne was playing outside, fully regressed and I watched as he laid next to her, caring for her and prepared to protect her... just as he would any other very young child.

As his life draws to a close, we will lose not just a pet but a protector of children and babies... regressed or not.

“Where Big Babies Live” is the very different story of a special gated community where not only adult babies can live freely and openly, but children and teens who wear diapers and are still babies can attend a special school that caters to their needs. While a work of fiction, it will leave you wishing that it were real and that you had been lucky enough to attend school there.

Read about our authors and how they came to be who they are now...

AB authors all have a backstory that explains who they are and how they came to write their books. Have a listen to two of them as they tell their stories...

Ben Pathen:

I'm glad I'm 'different' and I don't want to be 'normal'. I want to be unusual and one of the few. I'm not sure how many of us are out there, but we're still very much a minority, something that is indulged in behind closed curtains. I like it that way. I like being a member of such a 'unique club'. It's more fun having an interest that I should imagine that not many people are aware of, or am completely I wrong about that? How many people really do know about us but don't mention it because if they're aware of it, it may mean they too are attracted to it... Read the complete story here.

Madeline Wood:

*When I was a young child, I stopped wetting at night just before I started school. I was very pleased with myself as were my parents. The end of diapers was hailed as a success and I was now just like my friends who as far as I knew at the time, were dry at night. Some years later I found that one of my friends who mysteriously never slept over was wetting her bed until she was fifteen. But we were all enjoying our blissful ignorance of what might go on behind closed doors. No one wore diapers as far as we were concerned. We were all 'big kids'... ### We have a winner!!!

Congratulations to Angela who won the April Bedwetting Competition with a stellar effort of sixteen entries. Thanks to the other contributors for their wonderful efforts and support. Click on the wet bed below to see all the contributions.

Thank you for all your input!

Over the last month, we have had two new surveys out there discussing the effect of COVID19 on ABs and the question of 'how did it all begin'?

Check out the very latest results of 350+ respondents.
