

LOCKDOWN MIRACLE

The Lockdown Diaper Miracle

"I was very afraid of how being stuck at home in an enforced lockdown would work.

I wear diapers quite a lot and my wife is okay with it but... there was a problem. With rare exception, I wore them when she was not around. If she was out of the house, I would wear. When I went to work, I would wear but take them off before I got home. It was a ritual we had that worked. I got my diaper-wearing and she didn't get angry with me and it worked brilliantly - until the lockdown. We were both going to be home 24/7 and the thought of not wearing diapers for weeks or even months made me frustrated and apprehensive. On the second week, my wife suggested that I just wear them even though she was around. Her 'not in front of me' rule was years old and it worked and so we were loathe to alter it. But the world had changed.

So, I wore a diaper around her under my clothes. She didn't care at all. Then she suggested that there was no point in hiding since we were locked down together and so for the first time, she saw me in a diaper and... complimented me! I was shocked and so was she. Somewhere, over the past few years of mutual respect of boundaries she had subconsciously decided that diapers weren't really a problem after all.

I wore openly, including wetting in them around her. Then she suggested that I wear to bed if I wanted to. I was ecstatic and since then, have worn many nights but not most. We are still both finding our way but the enforced closeness has led us to discover that we care for each other far more than we thought. We also both discovered that diapers were not the big deal both of us thought.

I wear diapers. She approves. It's a miracle!" (via email)
